PERFORMANCE CHART

COMMENTARY

The Titan Global Balanced Fund returned 1.9% in August; taking the fund's outperformance over the peer group year-to-date to 7.7% versus 6.2%.

Global stocks regained lost ground in August, advancing 1.8% in sterling terms following a difficult July, supported by economic resilience and a healthy earnings backdrop. That said, Middle Eastern tensions continued to influence energy prices and inflation expectations, and monetary policy remained a source of uncertainty.

From a portfolio perspective, technology was the driver of performance, with BlueBox Global Technology advancing 6.2%. Titan Global Blue Chip also delivered sizeable performance advancing 4.9%. Palantir was the single largest contributor for the month, adding nearly 1% to the overall strategy; its second-quarter results providing perhaps the clearest example yet of AI moving beyond experimentation and into large-scale commercial deployment.

On the downside, infrastructure exposure lagged as the month's gains concentrated in technology and energy rather than the more defensive, real-asset-linked strategies and this was reflected in our allocation to KBI Global Sustainable Infrastructure, down -1.0% over the period.

Over the month, we have continued to enhance portfolio diversification by increasing exposure to strategies with lower correlation to traditional equities and bonds. As part of this, we have introduced the Janus Absolute Return Fund, which aims to deliver returns above cash across a range of market conditions through a portfolio of long and short positions in large-cap global equities. Managed by Ben Wallace for over a decade, the strategy was originally designed for private clients seeking cash-plus returns with strong downside protection. We believe it is a proven, low-risk addition that can help smooth investment outcomes.

We have also reviewed our fixed income allocation and added the Invesco Global Total Return Fund, a core global strategic bond fund that complements our existing credit-focused holdings. Its greater exposure to government bonds and currencies should provide added resilience during periods of corporate bond weakness. Within equities, we have taken profits from technology-focused positions and reallocated capital to regional equities, reducing reliance on the AI-driven growth theme.
